CHÂTEAU BÉLAIR-MONANGE

PREMIER GRAND CRU CLASSÉ

REVUE DE PRESSE - MILLÉSIME 2011

Decanter

92 pts, James Anson

« This was the last vintage that Belair Monange and Magdelaine were separate properties, and ironically this wine was made in the Magdelaine cellars because work was ongoing at Belair. This is a gorgeous wine with clear minerality and energy - a lyricism that shows the benefits of limestone in a dry year like 2011. The tannins are a little more angular than the 2010 but there's so much to enjoy in the softer raspberry and redcurrant flavours and peony edging. It's certainly beginning to open up for drinking, particularly if given a few hours in a carafe. » (March 2019)

« Lots of ripe-strawberry character with raspberry undertones. Full body with round, velvety tannins and a juicy finish. This is very special for the vintage. Impressive. Try in 2017. » (February 2014)

« Wonderful wine for the vintage with firm and silky tannins, savory and ripe fruit as well as hints of earth and mushrooms. Chalk and citrus undertones. Full body and a beautiful finish. Addition of Magdelaine vineyards shows promise and expanded quality. Better after 2017. » (April 2014)

« Tightly focused, with a fresh core of dark cherry and currant notes, driven by a strong chalk accent before slightly austere tannins take over on the back end. Light blood orange and tobacco details are starting to emerge as well.—Non-blind Bélair-Monange vertical (December 2016). Best from 2021 through 2030. »
